21 LANDMARKS COMMISSION DISCUSSION

23 Mayor Wilkinson explained that the Landmarks Commission was low on members, and 24 said he questioned whether there was enough for the Landmarks Commission to do to justify 25 appointing new individuals. As Council liaison to the Landmarks Commission, Councilmember 26 Ivie said she had been frustrated more people had not been appointed to the Landmarks 27 Commission. She said the Landmarks Commission was involved in getting historic sites listed on 28 the historic register. She said the Commission had not had enough members to meet prior to the 29 pandemic, and still did not have enough members. Councilmember Ivie emphasized the lack of 30 meetings was not due to a lack of things to do. She pointed out the "V" on the hillside was turning 31 50, and there was interest in pursuing some type of recognition. She referred to the suggestion 32 to combine the Landmarks Commission with the Whitaker Museum Board, and stated she was 33 strongly against the idea. Considering the momentum lost during the pandemic, she suggested 34 going back to some of the previous members of the Landmarks Commission and request that 35 they share some of the vision with new people brought on. Councilmember Ivie stated there was 36 not a shortage of potential historic sites to explore, or a shortage of other things for the Landmarks
37 Commission to do. She commented that addition of historic sites to the historic register requires 38 a Landmarks Commission.

39
40 Councilmember Fillmore said she believed the situation was largely due to the pandemic 41 and miscommunication. She said she was aware of multiple citizens willing to serve on the 42 Landmarks Commission, and expressed the opinion that the City should continue to have a body
43 focused on what could be done to highlight Centerville's rich history. Councilmember McEwan
44 said it sounded like the City should fill the vacancies and let the Landmarks Commission continue
45 with their work. Councilmember Mecham said she would like to see the Landmarks Commission 46 continue.

47
48 Mayor Wilkinson said he would reach out to Landmarks Commission members whose 49 terms had expired and ask if they were interested in continuing on the Landmarks Commission,

1 and told the Council he would welcome suggestions of Centerville residents interested in joining 2 the Landmarks Commission.
